Thoughts for Today's Readings

To the Point: This gospel has a chain of witnessing: John the Baptist points Jesus out to John's own disciples; they leave John behind and follow Jesus. One of them in turn brings his brother to Jesus, and these brothers are Andrew and Simon Peter, who we now know as apostles and saints. This is also a fascinating moment in their story. We know how it turns out and how important these men will become to the Christian tradition. But they don't know that yet. They are just meeting Jesus and about all they know about him is that he's the kind of guy who gives you a nickname whether you asked for it or not. And yet this ordinary moment of meeting turns into an extraordinary moment of calling and of seekers saying yes in a way that will change their lives—and the lives of countless others to come. Saints are not made in a vacuum; God offers each of us not just a personal relationship but a community in which to grow and thrive. All of us are dependent on others to bring us closer to Christ and to know him more fully.

To Experience: Biblical stories of calling can sometimes inspire envy among those of us who do not get to hear God's call so clearly. The fact of the matter is that such clear and immediate callings are rare. For most of us, our work of discernment, of learning to listen to God, is long and slow. With practice, we become more familiar with the ways God works in our hearts, learning to set with apparent silence until we hear God's voice within it. We also learn to hear and see God at work in the people of our lives, in the needs present to us, and in our own giftedness.

1. John the Baptist points out Jesus to Andrew, and Andrew brings Simon to Jesus. Who has pointed the way to Christ for you? Who brings you closer to Jesus?
2. What are some of the times you've heard God's call in your life? How have you responded?
3. Where do you struggle to hear God's voice?

From January through May 2024, we will be looking at the "Five Alive Practices" from Bishop Ricken's Pastoral Letter, "Encountering Jesus in the Eucharist." During the month of January we will be looking at the Sunday Mass.

Dear Brother and Sisters,

As many of you know, I was sent to Rome for my studies for the priesthood. One of the best parts of that experience was meeting Catholics from all over the world. These included Catholics from modern day Iraq. It might surprise you to learn that there are Catholics in Iraq, but it is one of the most ancient Christian communities in the world. Their language, culture, and spirituality is called Chaldean. Although the population of Chaldean Catholics in Iraq is ancient, the years of war, persecution, and terrorism have driven them from their home. Now there are very few Chaldeans left in Iraq, but there are sizable Chaldean Catholic populations in San Diego and Detroit.

Among my classmates were two young Chaldean men studying to be priests with the intention of returning to Iraq to preach the Gospel and celebrate the sacraments. They returned home. They were both ordained. They were both killed for being priests. They were killed on a Sunday. Those who persecute the Church, look for Christians on Sunday, since they know that Christians go to church on Sunday. This includes churches being attacked on First Communion Sunday in Baghdad, Chinese Communist police arresting Christians in their churches on Sundays, or St. Oscar Romero, the well-known Archbishop from El Salvador, who was assassinated while celebrating Sunday Mass by agents of the Salvadoran government in 1980.

All these modern day Christians, who suffer for the faith, remind us that the age of the martyrs is not something remembered in the history books but is the reality for many Catholics today. They echo the words of the martyrs of Abitene, who were killed by the Roman Empire in northern Africa in 303 A.D. When asked why they risked gathering on a Sunday to celebrate the Eucharist, they simply responded, "We cannot live without Sunday."

In our culture that is relatively prosperous, it costs us nothing to participate in Sunday Mass. Because Sunday costs us nothing, I am afraid that we treat it as something cheap. But the poor, especially the working poor in places such as Bahrain or Dubai, show us the value of Sunday since they lose their wages and risk their jobs to go to Sunday Mass.

In our culture that is relatively peaceful, it involves no danger to gather for Sunday Mass. Since it involves no danger and no risk, Sunday Mass can all too easily become something optional rather than something essential. But my Iraqi classmates from Rome, along with so many persecuted Catholics today, show us that Sunday Mass is essential, worth literally risking life and limb, since they "cannot live without Sunday."

This week, I ask you to reflect on the importance of Sunday. Ask yourself why persecuted Christians will risk so much for the opportunity to gather for Sunday Mass? Ponder, why do they say, by both word and action, "We cannot live without Sunday"?

*Sunday's blessings be with you,
 Father Bill*

Mass for the People of the Parish

Each week, normally on one of the Sunday Masses, you will notice that one of the Masses is offered for the "People of Holy Trinity and St. Gregory Parishes." This Mass is referred to as the "pro populo"

Mass, which is Latin "for the people." Per Code of Canon Law* the pastor of a parish (or in this case the parish administrator) is obligated to offer Mass for the benefit of the people of the parish each Sunday and every Holy Day of Obligation. Since this is a requirement of the law, the parish does not collect a stipend for this Mass. For a priest that has care of more than one parish, he may offer one Mass to cover all the parishes he serves. On occasion, the Mass "pro populo" can be shifted to a weekday, but this should be the exception, and not the normal practice.

*If interested see Canon 534, easily referenced on the Vatican website.
