Thoughts for Today's Readings

To the Point: People are astonished at Jesus' teaching; his authority contrasts sharply with the way the scribes have been teaching. Parenting experts like to make a distinction between authoritarian and authoritative parenting. Authoritarian parents are strict and cold; they strive to control their children, expect obedience without question, and mete out punishment for noncompliance. Authoritative parents are also strict, but they set boundaries with warmth and compassion and involve their children in decision-making. Their work is slower—it takes longer to explain the rules than to simply set them—but putting in this time sets them up for a parental authority based on trust rather than on fear. At the beginning of Jesus' public ministry, we get a hint of which kind of authority Jesus will exert. He will set boundaries and declare difficult moral teachings, but he is able to do so because his authority is based on love.

To Experience: Jesus' haste and clarity of mission might seem to contrast with most of our lives. After decades of prayer and discernment, he is confident in his mission when the right time comes for it. He is now in haste; Mark's gospel leaves no room for delay. In this passage, he arrives in Capernaum and sets straight to teaching. It is perhaps unusual for us to be called with such clarity; our missions usually unfold over a lifetime. But when we attend to God's callings, we can move with the same confidence that Jesus does.

1. How do you tend to respond to authority?
2. Who have you experienced as a true prophet? Who has revealed God's voice to you?
3. How do you lend your voice to Jesus' teachings?

Dear Brother and Sisters,

We continue our discussion of Sunday Mass as we look at Bishop's "Five Alive" practices from his pastoral letter, "Encountering Jesus in the Eucharist: Disciples Called to Worship."

In the letter, the Bishop reminds us that participating in Mass on Sundays and Holy Days of Obligation is a grave responsibility. This obligation is not just a rule imposed by the church but reflects our understanding of who God is and what He expects from us.

Each Sunday, we begin the Creed with these words, "I believe in One God, the Father Almighty, Creator of heaven and earth, of all things visible and invisible." Since these words are repeated so frequently, their impact can be muted.

But what are we saying with these words? By proclaiming Him as Creator, we are proclaiming that without God, we simply would not exist. He created us, and we belong to Him. By proclaiming Him as Father Almighty, we are proclaiming that He has given us life, provides for our needs, and enriches us with His blessings.

From God comes our existence, our life, all that we have, and all that we cherish. We do not deserve it. We have not earned it. He was not obligated to create us. He was not obligated to breathe life into our mortal bodies and to bless us with His grace. It naturally follows that we owe Him a debt of gratitude.

Religion is a virtue. St. Thomas Aquinas does not place the virtue of religion under the theological virtues, Faith, Hope and Love. He places religion under the virtue of justice. The basic definition of justice is "to give to each what is owed to them." For example, we owe our employer an honest day's work, and our employer owes us an honest day's pay. The virtue of patriotism recognizes that we owe honor and respect to our nation and those who hold office in our nation. The virtue of religion recognizes that we owe God a debt of gratitude and praise. The act by which we repay to God the debt of gratitude and praise is called the act of worship.

Now, when we owe a debt to another, we do not get to decide how that debt is repaid. The bank would not be amused if one attempted to pay their mortgage with seashells, even if it was explained that seashells were once used as currency in Papua, New Guinea.

In the same way, God gets to determine the shape of our worship. In the Ten Commandments, He commands (not suggests), "Remember to keep holy the Lord's Day." Further in the Old Testament, the Lord gives detailed instructions to Moses about how sacrifices are to be offered.

This is reflected in the New Testament. Because the Lord was Resurrected on a Sunday, and hence He conquered sin and death on a Sunday, for Christians the Lord's day is Sunday. Further, Jesus institutes how worship is offered in the New Covenant, when He gives us these words at the Last Supper, "He took bread, and when he had given thanks, he broke it and gave it to them, saying, 'This is my body, which is given for you. Do this in remembrance of me.' And likewise the cup after they had eaten, saying, 'This cup that is poured out for you is the new covenant in my blood'" (Luke 22:19-20, ESV).

If we take the Word of God seriously, we understand the significance of the Sunday obligation. Why should we celebrate the Eucharist on Sunday? Because God commands it.

*Blessings,
Father Bill*
