Thoughts for Today's Readings

To the Point: The last sentence of this gospel hides a whole lot of life within it. "The child grew," yes, but it didn't just happen! He grew because Mary and Joseph worked tirelessly, as good parents do, to provide for his needs. They fed him and cleaned him; they taught him to sleep through the night and to walk and to feed himself. They cheered when the Word spoke his first word. But at the same time, they can't take full responsibility for the child's growth; it is wonderful and mysterious that children grow up. Parenthood is work undertaken in partnership with God. God was with Mary and Joseph in the painful parts of the job, both those unique to raising the Son of God and those sorrows that every parent feels. There is much pain in giving your heart over to someone who is constantly changing. "The child grew" and Mary and Joseph, like many of us, must have felt simultaneous delight at all he was learning and grief for the smaller versions of him that they loved so dearly and would never get back.

To Experience: In a church that affirms the goodness of children and the sacredness of the work of parenting, there can be a tendency to equate family size with holiness. But the Holy Family had only one child, and this group of three serves as a model for all our families, regardless of size. Large families are a beautiful gift to the church, a visible sign of God's life-giving creativity. And God calls us to a legitimate variety of family sizes and is no less present in smaller families too.

1. What does family look like for you at this stage in life? How do your relationships with your parents, siblings, or children reveal God to you?
2. Where do you struggle to see God in your family? Where might God be inviting you to grow in patience and love for them?
3. How could you include God more fully in your familial relationships?

Dear Brothers and Sisters,

The Sunday between Christmas and the Solemnity of Mary, the Holy Mother of God (January 1) is the Sunday of the Holy Family. Squeezed between these two great celebrations, the Holy Family is often overlooked, but taking the extra effort to reflect on this feast provides us with a richer understanding of what it means to be a holy family of faith in the world today.

As we celebrate the Holy Family, the story of Abraham, Sarah, and Isaac gives us an example of what it means to trust God with the protection and blessing of our family. God does not simply do these things, he does them with abundance. The faith of Abraham, Sarah, and Isaac provides a model for all families to trust in God's providence in every moment of their lives, especially at pivotal moments of discernment or crisis. Like Abraham, Sarah, and Isaac, we too are called to form families of faith who trust and believe in God's promise of his continued presence in our lives. Remembering that God has kept his promises in the past, we can trust that he will continue to keep his promises for us in the present day. This trust provides the foundation for our obedience as we continually discern God's will for ourselves and our families.

The story of Abraham, Sarah, and Isaac also shows us how to recognize that every good we have comes from God and ultimately belongs to him. Since every good we have comes from God, we are called to use the good gifts he has given us according to his plan. "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, declares the LORD" (Isaiah 55:8). Often as we discern how God calls us to make use of the gifts, goods and blessings that he provides us, we are challenged, since the ways of God and the ways of the world often run in opposite directions. When God asked for Isaac in sacrifice, the way of the world would have led Abraham to turn away from God. And although Abraham was greatly grieved, he followed the way of trust. And by his trust, "he received Isaac back" (Hebrews 11:19) and was greatly blessed.

To be a holy family of faith often requires trust in God's plan, but the examples of the many holy families that go before us, give us a reason to trust that God keeps his promises when what he asks seems difficult or even impossible. Our Father in heaven is a father who always keeps his promises.

Blessings and Merry Christmas,
Fr. Bill

A Christmas Message

"For the grace of God has appeared, bringing salvation for all people, training us to renounce ungodliness and worldly passions, and to live self-controlled, upright, and godly lives."

Titus 2:11-12

from the second reading for Midnight Christmas Mass

Dear Brothers and Sisters in Christ,

Each Christmas, we recall how our Lord and God chose to enter the world. Although he could have entered our world on clouds of awe and majesty, the Son of God chose to be born of a humble maiden. Although, as King of Kings, he could have been born in a palace surrounded by splendor and riches; he chose to be born in the poverty of the stable.

Many people hesitate to approach God. Perhaps they are afraid, or they feel unworthy. However, a newborn baby draws almost everyone to the side of the crib. By being born as the infant son of Mary, our Lord Jesus shows us that we should not be afraid to draw close to God.

By choosing to be born into a poor and humble family, our Lord Jesus shows us that he has come to be a God for the poor, for the lowly, for the humble. As his mother sang in her song, often called the "Magnificat," the Lord God "had filled the hungry with good things, but the rich he has sent away empty" (see Luke 1:46-55). So, we do not need to come to God trying to impress him with our accomplishments or our status. Rather we can come to him with our needs, our shortcomings, and even our failures. This is what we mean by coming to him in our poverty and hunger. And indeed, the greater our hunger when we come to him, even greater will we be filled with the good things that he wishes to give us.

Christmas is often a time that people feel intense competition and the stress of high expectations. But what does Jesus expect from you? All he wants is for you to draw close to the side of his manger. We do not need to try to impress him, but we do have to have room in our hearts to welcome him.

This Christmas, my prayer is that each of you find the empty place in your heart, and prepare it to welcome our Lord. There you will experience the joy of the shepherds when they found the Lord in Bethlehem.

Blessings and Merry Christmas,

Fr. Bill

Saint Gregory Nazianzen Feast Day—January 2

After his baptism at 30, Gregory gladly accepted his friend Basil's invitation to join him in a newly founded monastery. The solitude was broken when Gregory's father, a bishop, needed help in his diocese and estate. It seems that Gregory was ordained a priest practically by force, and only reluctantly accepted the responsibility. He skillfully avoided a schism that threatened when his own father made compromises with Arianism. At 41, Gregory was chosen suffragan bishop of Caesarea and at once came into conflict with Valens, the emperor, who supported the Arians.

An unfortunate by-product of the battle was the cooling of the friendship of two saints. Basil, his archbishop, sent him to a miserable and unhealthy town on the border of unjustly created divisions in his diocese. Basil reproached Gregory for not going to his See.

When protection for Arianism ended with the death of Valens, Gregory was called to rebuild the faith in the great see of Constantinople, which had been under Arian teachers for three decades. Retiring and sensitive, he dreaded being drawn into the whirlpool of corruption and violence. He first stayed at a friend's home, which became the only orthodox church in the city. In such surroundings, he began giving the great sermons on the Trinity for which he is famous. In time, Gregory did rebuild the faith in the city, but at the cost of great suffering, slander, insults, and even personal violence. An interloper even tried to take over his bishopric.

His last days were spent in solitude and austerity. He wrote religious poetry, some of it autobiographical, of great depth and beauty. He was acclaimed simply as "the Theologian." St. Gregory Nazianzen shares the celebration of his liturgical feast with St. Basil the Great on January 2.

Reflection

It may be small comfort, but post-Vatican II turmoil in the Church is a mild storm compared to the devastation caused by the Arian heresy, a trauma the Church has never forgotten. Christ did not promise the kind of peace we would love to have—no problems, no opposition, no pain. In one way or another, holiness is always the way of the cross.
