Thoughts for Today's Readings

To the Point: This gospel introduces an important concept for our life of faith: faithfulness in small matters is how we practice our readiness to be faithful in greater ways. As athletes train through consistent training, we grow in virtue through the discipline of consistent practice whenever the opportunity arises. Small moral choices might seem not to matter, but they do; they are an opportunity to develop our holiness muscles. While the servants deal with their master's money for a limited time, we are responsible for our gifts for the entirety of our lives. This can be an overwhelming proposition, but there is reassurance here: practicing trustworthiness in small ways prepares us for the great joy that God promises. In all the ordinary ways we act with compassion and justice and integrity, we are practicing and preparing for nothing less than heaven.

To Experience: Whatever our life circumstances, there are countless opportunities every day to make right or wrong choices. This can seem overwhelming and demanding: why would God ask so much of us? But it can also be seen as an opportunity, one provided by God's endless mercy. We have countless opportunities to do wrong, but we also have boundless chances to correct course, to try again, to participate anew in God's work of making us holy and whole.

1. Are there areas in your life where you could practice greater faithfulness in seemingly small ways?
2. Do you find it overwhelming or reassuring to think that there might be countless opportunities to grow in holiness in your everyday life?
3. What do you think of the images of marriage presented in the first reading and the psalm? If you are married, do they resonate with your experience? If you are not, what might those readings be inviting you to consider about faithfulness and commitments in others areas of your life?

Year of Mary
October 1, 2022 to December 8, 2023

"In light of the hour of judgment, the grace of being a Christian becomes all the more clear to me. It grants me knowledge, and indeed friendship, with the judge of my life, and thus allows me to pass confidently through the dark door of death."
 Pope Benedict XVI

Dear Brothers and Sisters,

Peace be with you. This will be the last column about Catholic funerals.

After the Reception of the Body which begins the funeral Mass, the Mass continues in the usual manner with the Liturgy of the Word. The funeral Mass is one of the few occasions when the Church does not assign readings for Mass, but allows the family members and friends of the deceased to select appropriate readings.

Following the readings, the priest (or deacon) preaches the homily. The guidance for the homily is that it should dwell on God's compassionate love and the paschal mystery of the Lord. The homily should not be a eulogy of the deceased. The appropriate time for a eulogy is at the Vigil or if necessary, immediately before the beginning of the funeral Mass.

The Church encourages a funeral Mass since in partaking of the Body of Christ in the Eucharist, all are given a foretaste of eternal life in Christ and are united with Christ, with each other, and with all the faithful, living and dead: "Because there is one bread, we who are many are one body, for we all partake of the one bread" (see 1 Corinthians 10:17).

And the funeral Mass concludes with the Final Commendation. In the Commendation, the body of the deceased is honored with incense, which signifies respect for the body as the temple of the Holy Spirit. In the prayer of commendation the community calls upon God's mercy for the benefit of the deceased.

The last part of the Catholic funeral liturgy is the Committal. The Committal is the "graveside service." It is the final act of the community of Faith in caring for the body of the deceased and expresses the hope that the deceased awaits the glory of the Resurrection. With this act, the community of Faith proclaims that the grave, once a sign of futility and despair, has been transformed by Christ's own death and Resurrection into a sign of hope and promise.

Since the Committal usually comes at the end of a period of visitation, a Vigil, and a funeral Mass, it is designed to be brief. The grave is blessed, when possible the mortal remains are lowered into the grave while a prayer is recited, and those who are gathered are blessed. Although this ritual is short, it provides the opportunity for a final good-bye, and assists family members and friends of the deceased to find final closure.

Four bulletin columns have focused on the funeral liturgy, there has not been adequate space to address all the common questions. Next year, we will re-visit the Catholic understanding of death, and our liturgical practices associated with death. The FORMED APP has a series about the Catholic understanding about death called "Eternal Rest: The Art of Dying Well."

Blessings,
Father Bill
