Thoughts for Today's Readings

To the Point: This gospel makes a distinction between the political and the spiritual realms and implies that we have duties to them both. The church's tradition does not call lay persons to withdraw from secular life; involvement in the political can be part of our partnership with God, how we make the kingdom of heaven present here on earth. It can be an expression of faith, part of how we participate in God's work of love and justice, making this world more holy. But this world, in its current sin-marred state, is not our final home. Political campaigns or candidates or parties can run the risk of becoming idols when we place our hopes in them. In the end, politics leaves us homeless; they will ultimately fail us because our true home is with God. While we are meant to strive for justice, only God can bring about the final justice we seek.

To Experience: Political leaders are not the only thing in our lives that run the risk of becoming an idol. Money is a common one; on its own it is a morally neutral tool that can be used for good, but when we pursue it for its own sake it can start to take a place in our hearts that ought to belong to God alone. Security is another; the way we live sometimes betrays that we value our own safety and comfort far above the solidarity to which the gospel calls us.

1. How do you participate in politics? Have you ever thought of this practice as an extension of your faith?
2. What in your life runs the risk of becoming an idol? Where do you spend your time, talent, and treasure? Does this spending align with what you claim to value?
3. What relationships do you have where you are in a position of power? How could you exercise that power in a way that is consistent with God's vision of justice for the world?

"It is not Death that will come to fetch me,
it is the good God."
St. Therese of Lisieux

Dear Brothers and Sisters,

Shortly after I was ordained a priest, I was given a form to complete. It was for my funeral plan. The diocese wants priests to be prepared. Over the years, I have been asked by parishioners, relatives, and even friends about helping them to plan their funerals.

The next few columns will provide a review about what we, as Catholics, believe about funerals, and some guidance about how to plan a Catholic funeral. The introduction to the Order of Christian Funerals, the liturgical book used by priests and deacons to celebrate Catholic funerals, contains some beautiful teachings about the Catholic understanding of death and how this finds liturgical expression in the Catholic funeral rites:

"At the death of a Christian, whose life of faith was begun in the waters of Baptism and strengthened at the Eucharistic table, the Church intercedes on behalf of the deceased because of Her confident belief that death is not the end nor does it break the bonds forged in life. The Church also ministers to the sorrowing and consoles them in the funeral rites with the comforting Word of God and the sacrament of the Eucharist. Christians celebrate the funeral rites to offer worship, praise, and thanksgiving to God for the gift of life which has now been returned to Him, the author of life and the hope of the just" (Order of Christian Funerals, par. 4-5).

This introduction highlights three reasons that we celebrate funerals. First, like all liturgical celebrations, is to offer worship and praise to God, and express gratitude for blessings received. We celebrate funerals, because we have the Faith to believe that death is not the end of the story. This is a bold proclamation of the Gospel message. When people gather for funerals they naturally share memories and stories about their deceased loved one, recognizing the many ways that God has blessed them in life. In our celebration of funerals, it is important to respond to these blessings with prayers of thanksgiving.

Next, we intercede on behalf of the deceased. Paragraph 1030 of the Catechism of the Catholic Church teaches: "All who die in God's grace and friendship, but still imperfectly purified, are indeed assured of their eternal salvation; but after death they undergo purification, so as to achieve the holiness necessary to enter the joy of heaven." The name for this final purification is purgatory. Christ teaches, "Be perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect" (Matthew 5:48). Perfection is the standard to get into heaven. However, perfection is a pretty high standard. Purgatory is the process by which God perfects us. Since "we believe that all the ties of friendship and affection which knit us as one throughout our lives do not unravel with death," our prayers and sacrifices benefit the faithful departed in the process of final purification. By our prayers and sacrifices, our loved ones spend less time in purgatory.

*Memento mori,
Father Bill*

Unexpected St. Gregory Kitchen Need

During recent usage of the stand mixer in the kitchen, it was noticed to not be running smoothly any longer. It was determined that there are numerous problems with the machine and is not worth the money for repair. The stand mixer has been used countless hours for many, many years and has served us well.

The mixer continues to be used on a regular basis throughout the year along with intense use at the Annual Fall Feast. The Finance Council has approved the purchase of new machine at a cost of $3,554. The purchase has been made with expected delivery within two weeks. (Just in time for Fall Feast!)

This is an added expense that is not in the current budget. Donations are being accepted to help defray the cost to the parish budget line and can be brought to the office or placed in the collection basket at Mass. Thank you.
